Papa Road Runner and his brood were dozing and sunning themselves in the warm winter desert sun. Papa stretched and yawned, and turned over for another nap. Then, just as he closed his eyes, he heard a sound. Like a flash, he was up.

"Get on your feet, get set to run. Be on your mark now, everyone," he ordered.

"(Beep beep) What is it, Pop? Why must we go?" asked one little Road Runner.

"Someone's coming, that I know," replied Papa. Then listening a moment, he added, "I'm not quite sure, but it could be . . . that hungry mean ol' Wile E."

"(Beep beep) That coyote always spoils our fun," complained another. "He always keeps us on the run."

"That's true," said Papa. "But if we didn't run each day, we'd lose our speed on a get-away! And that could be the end for all, if other dangers should befall."

"Look! I see him down the road a way," one youngster said, "but he's not running fast today."

"(Beep beep) I see he's carrying something, too," said another. "I wonder what he's going to do."

"It's a trick, I'm sure of that," said Papa. "So now it's time for us to scat."

As the Road Runners took off, Wile E. Coyote shouted, "Wait! Don't run! I have something for you!"

"(Beep beep) Don't believe a single word," said Papa. "That's the biggest lie I've heard. It's just a trick—you wait and see—he wants to catch us easily."

"Wait!" yelled the Coyote again. "I made a nice pie for you. I want to be friends."

"Oh, sure," said Papa. "Suddenly he thinks we're friends! Well, before it starts, this friendship ends!" And with a sudden spurt of speed, Papa Road Runner led his children farther down the road.

"I'm getting tired," said one lad. "(Beep beep) Can't we stop?"

"No, indeed, we'd better not," replied Papa. "Run up that hill—on the double—we'll lose him there with little trouble."

As the Road Runners scrambled uphill, the Coyote came puffing up behind them.

"I went to lots of trouble to make you this pie," he shouted. "Don't run off!"

"I don't believe a word you say," retorted Papa. "You never give a thing away!"

"But—honest—it's for you," said the Coyote, struggling up the hill, holding the pie high in his hand.

"(Beep beep) Then I'm sure it's full of spice—like red pepper—nothing nice," said Papa Road Runner.

"Don't be so suspicious," snarled Wile E. "Would I do a thing like that?"

"I know your ways—of course, you would," replied Papa. "You never do a thing that's good. You only hoped we'd stop to eat, 'cause then you knew you'd have us beat."

"I'll get you yet!" shouted the Coyote, angry that Papa Road Runner had seen through his trick. And he scrambled faster up the hill. Then, "Oops!" he cried, as his foot slipped and he started to skid. As he lost his balance and tumbled to the bottom of the hill, the pie flew through the air. Then it landed—with a soft plop!—right on his face!

"Now see what you've done!" he roared.

"(Beep beep) Ha, ha!" laughed Papa. "I surely hope you enjoy your pie. You look just great with it in your eye!" And the Road Runners headed for home and safety.
